TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.

TURQUESITE

Naturally milky white in color, this stone has been dyed to give it the lovely blue color which resembles Turquoise, a stone often used by the Indians of the Southwestern United States in jewelry and medicine pouches. The mineral name for this stone is Howlite or Magnesite.