AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.

AVENTURINE

The color in this green variety of Quartz (Silicon Dioxide) is caused by inclusions of Fuchsite, a green Mica. Its use as a semiprecious gemstone dates from ancient times when it was sought after by kings and princes. Today Aventurine continues to be used in jewelry making and ornamental carvings.